BLUE CINEMA TV llc

Daniele Baldacci founded BLUE CINEMA TV llc company in 1999 as the culmination of three generations of photographic craft, which began in 1929. His experience and expertise are confirmed by important collaborations in motion picture projects as cinematographer (The Sweet Sound Of Life by G. Bertolucci, Musikanten and Nothing's As It Seems by F. Battiato, The Sacred Mountain Of Varallo and Desert Rose by E. Sgarbi, Elsa & Fred by Michael Radford, Day 6 by V. Venturi and many others). Appearing at major international film festivals in LOCARNO, VENICE, NEW YORK, MOSCOW, SOFIA, Daniele Baldacci cinematography received many awards including three KODAK awards, and six international film festival "Best Cinematography" awards. In recent years Daniele Baldacci developed his patented invention OLOS® (EPO patent, OAMI trademark), a technology that can be viewed as an enabler and a generator of "holographic human beings", interfaces that maintain the expressiveness and the familiarity of their human originals and merge it with the capabilities derived from the progress made in the field of natural language understanding and with the widespread connectivity allowed by the cloud and by the Internet of Things. In this way, OLOS® marries the technical strength of advanced engineering with the aesthetic pleasure of the cinematic tradition.
